The Daily Standard. Saturday, September 17, 1870. The New Constitution. - Where is it?

One might imagine that Gov. Musgrave had forgotten that be had promised the people to call an election this fall. Judging from the delay in producing the new constitution, a person would be justified in forming such a conclusion. Three, six, and nearly nine months have sed since he promised to proclaim that the eight constituencies should be elective, and not nominative-yet there is no new constitution. An Act has been passed in England to enable the Queen and the Governor to make a miserable attempt toward endowing the people with the semblance of freedom--the shadow of popular liberty, whilst the substance is withheld. But Parliament has been prorogued for some time ; the English papers have commented on the Act, guessed at its objects, and every-body has said there is to be a new constitution. Here we are, however, in the latter part of September, with the election to come off in a few weeks-and nobody knows whether we are to have nine members or a dozen. What the alifications of the electors will be, or w many districts. We can't conceive that Gov. Musgrave is hatching, if nine months' incubation be required. It would puzzle any one, no matter how actute, to account for the delay. It may be that a despotic Governor is not well dapted to hatch constitutional liberty; or it may be that those sages,-Helmoto defend their political fledgling. There must be something very extraordinary to induce Gov. Musgrave to withhold the proclamation of the New Constitution. If there is, what can it be? A piece of state-craft? No opportunity for the people to criticise or protest against the expected abortion and its makers before the election shall have been called? All the details of district, qualifications, and laws governing elections, are purely stereotype matters. A pair of scissors and a solicitor could shape the details of the New Constitution in an hour. What then can be the cause of the delay? Possibly neglect. If that be the case, let the matter be handed over to Gov. Hankin, or the Town Clerk. Either of these parties would dress up the New Constitution, in presentable shape, in twenty-four hours. To postpone the proclamation of the New Constitution for some unfathomable and useless purpose is entirely unjustifiable. As the matter A Parties who have not yet paid their Substitute of the parties and the parties are requested to do so on or before Saturday stands now we, have no justification to are requested inst., to Mess proclamation. Besides, the people in self town and country are impatient. Waiting day by day, week by week, month by month, and, in fact, year by year, for an improved Constitution, is not calculated to improve the temper of the people. If the New Constitution be not made unblic soon possibly the heat thing. made public soon, possibly the best thing to do will be to telegraph to Downing popular expectation in this matter. What Would France Say [if She

Street, to learn whether we are to have from a public meeting, would soon wake up Gov. Musgrave to a lively sense of

A Frenchman, who is corresponding with the Loudon Times, speaks to this question as

The French are often called "a warlike race," "a nation of soldiers." These are stereotyped phrases, and are, in a certain sense, quite true. Our young peasants are quickly and easily transformed into soldiers, and, even in these days of blustering and bravado, when any boasting would be particu-larly repugnant to delicate minds, the least self-asserting Frenchman if justified in saying that our army is unsurpassed. Nevertheless, these who maintain that France, as a nation, does not wish for war, are, I think, quite righ. There are, in fact, here, as in all countries, war lovers and war haters, but to distinguish between them one must not draw evertical line cutting throught the different social strata; a horizontal section would mark the separation far better. All the upper elasses are not bellicose, certainly, but as a rule, all peasants are pacific. The line should be drawn just where the conscription begins to bear with direct force, at that point where money fails wherewith to purchase a substi-tute for the lad who draws a " bad number." There is, there can be, it stands to reason, no enthusiasm for war among a natiou of peasant landowners whose sons are taking forcibly from their fields for soldiering. In all my dealings with our peasants, I have never seen even a pretence of liking war. They do not effect to disguise their horror of fighting. "A bad number" is the one great dread of all our village lads when that fatal twentieth year approaches. It underlies the fate of every rustic home. Until the conscription is past no plan of life can be formed, no hope safely indulged. Those who see our conscripts, with their tri-colour ribands streaming from their hats, parading arm in arm through the streets, and singing patriotic songs, see them when they are more than half drunk. But they can have no idea of the undistinguished grief with which the poor boys have learnt their fate a few hours before, or of the desolated homes they have There is, there can be, it stands to reason, no fore, or of the desolated homes they have left behind. When the discharged soldier comes back, if he does come back, his military service is like a piece of his life cut out, so many years to which he carcely ever alludes, which have altered, and, it may be, in some respects improved him, but quite unconsci-ously. I must in fairness, add that he never complains of them. The patience with which the French peasant bears the conscription is the French peasant bears the conscription is a daily recurring miracle with which I have never got familiarized. He seems to consider it as a heavenly dispensation against which there is no rebelling, and from which—and here he is probably right—no change of Government can exonerate him. His resignation in this respect explains the national surname of Jacques Bonhomme. The peasant alone with us is entitled to it. But

1. Cut up fine a bar of the Soap, and put one-half of it into your boiler with sufficient wafer to cover well your white clothes to be washed, and let the Soap dissolve; then put your clothes in, stirring them, and let them just come to a boil; then pour out clothes and water into a tub and let them soak twenty or thirty minutes, stirring them round in the tub occasionally to loosen the dirt, Such articles as collars, wristbands or any ar icle very dirty, should be rubbed through the hands a little while soaking in order to thoroughly loosen the dirt before boiling.

2. While your clothesare soaking put the other half of your cut Soap into your boiler, with sufficient clean water to boil, and let it be heating. After your clothes have soaked wring them out well and put into your boiling water, and let boil from 5 to 10 minutes; then rinse, blue and hang out to dry. If the above directions are followed, we will guarantee your clothes clean and white.

3. Wer your calcared and woollen clothes uses the same And has been fitted up with especial re-ference to the accommodation of Theatrics; and Musical Performances, Parties and Balls.

3. For your colored and woollen clothes use the same water you soaked and boil your white clothes with, only heating it up again, and pour it over your colored and woollen clothes, and let soak the same as your white clothes, also rubbling them through your hands while soaking, if very dirty. Then rinse in clear water, warm as your hands will bear, and you will thus accomplish a large washing in two hours.

By cutting up a bar of this Soap into two gallons water, and let boil until thoroughly dissolved, and then leave to cool, you will have two gallons of beautiful SOFT SOAP, as good as Common Soap for general house purposee.
